WELCOME

Welcome to Rosemary Cadden, Dr Godfrey Sibanda, and honorary members Suzette Coat and Lynne Mack (Rotary Club of Mississauga).

PRESIDENT'S REPORT

Today's meeting was a reminder that history (and challenges) can be engaging and entertaining.

Our guest speaker hitched a ride beside one of Australia's greatest explorers. And aided by a dry sense of humour, it made for some interesting stories of success and misadventures.

Stories on challenges and learning is highly appropriate in April, because Rotary International's monthly theme is the Environment.

And like our guest speaker's journey, there is much to learn about that challenge – and about ourselves.

At the global level, Rotary International now has a strategic partnership with the United Nations Environment Program (UNEP) to clean up, protect and monitor local waterways. This brings together Rotary's community-based actions and UNEP's technical expertise.

At the local level, Magill Sunrise Rotary is already assisting the local Gums Landcare group; supporting programs for the Murray River; and contributing to activities which strengthen conservation and ecological sustainability.

We are just hitchhikers on this planet - with a challenge. But in the words of Nelson Mandela - "It always seems impossible until it's done" – so stay tuned.

Cheers
Lindsay

Guest Speaker:
ELIZABETH BACKSHALL

How would you react if your child was diagnosed with a serious health issue?

Chances are you would feel your world had turned upside down – or at least, was on the slide. Would you flip a coin or let life slide?

Come along and find out how Elizabeth Backshall handled exactly that situation.

GUEST SPEAKER: ROSEMARY CADDEN

Bet Gebert, Rosemary Cadden & Pres. Lindsay

When you read that "McDouall Stuart Hitches a Ride" you think of him mounting the camel of a fellow traveller, but it is the title of Rosemary Cadden's new book.

Rosemary was promoting her book at last Sunday's Magill Market, where Club President Lindsay recognised an interesting guest speaker.

When I say new book, it has taken Rosemary eight years to pull it all together.

In addition to the review below, we learned that JMCS did not like to hear Rosemary dropping the F/Bomb on their journey and she didn't like his smoking. Hey, get with the times JMCS

Enjoy the following review courtesy of-Meg's Bookshop.

'McDouall Stuart hitches a ride is part rollicking road trip, part migrant memoir. Rosemary Cadden and nineteenth-century explorer John McDouall Stuart come from the same hometown in Scotland. They both arrived in South Australia looking for adventure, a new life, a new beginning. He has been called a pisspot. Rosemary has been known to have a wine glass in her hand. He seemed a natural choice to lead her through the country she's called home for five decades. Through the explorer's journals and extensive research, McDouall Stuart hitches a ride weaves a strong historical thread, from the settler-colonial beginnings of South Australia and the Northern Territory to events in more recent years. Readers get a front-seat view as Rosemary tackles sand dunes and dingoes, then leeches, storms and unexpected encounters. They also eavesdrop on her chats with pastoralists, remote nurses and First Nations people she met along the way - and conversations with McDouall Stuart who has decided to tag along for the ride. They are a tetchy couple. As Rosemary looks up, up, up at the lanky statue of the diminutive explorer in Alice Springs, her road trip to follow his tracks through the centre of Australia almost comes unstuck. There's been a protest calling for that statue to be removed midst escalating accusations suggesting he committed massacres. Who is this man she's travelling with? The real journey is just beginning as Rosemary learns more than she bargained about herself and this country, as she faces the truth about the legacy of settler colonialism.'

For less than $10 you can purchase Rosemary's eBook on Amazon and Kobo, or in paperback for $35 direct from the author at alongthoselines15.wordpress.com/book - or simply visit your local library.

Thanks Rosemary!

Ed: Thank you for filling in at such short notice when our scheduled guest speaker took ill. As one who has read your book may I say it was an incredible journey and I for one thoroughly enjoyed the ride.

ICE BREAKER

With the return of the Polly Waffle from yesteryear, let's answer the following question - What employment roles were around when you were entering the workforce, that are not around now?

RESPONSES:

Typing Pool; Tea Lady; the lady who cleaned the telephones (because we don't always have them anymore); Comptometrist; Telex machine operators; ice man & bread man who delivered by horse & cart; the Gestetner operator, the Night Soil man.

Simon shared that he used to work on a production line assembling refrigerators.... they certainly aren't built that way now.

QUIZ QUESTION

Adelaide has the third most expensive building in the world and Australia's most expensive. What is it?

ANSWER:

Mr Google said: The Royal Adelaide Hospital, costing $2 billion. It's so expensive because they use robots for transporting supplies all over the hospital, including medicine and food. Plus, it was built to be futuristic, with more than 800 beds, 6,000 staff and 2,000 car parks.

NB. The most expensive building in the world is the Great Mosque of Mecca in Saudi Arabia which cost $120 billion.
